The Waily News HOW LITTLE MINNIE LEARNED TO WORK FOR THE WOUND. ED SOLDIERS.

"Grand-papa! Grand-papa! I have been working this afternoon for the poor tick soldiers !"

So said a sweet little girl of three Summers, as she took her seat at the table, her little face radiant with pleasure, the joyful emotion, which always fills your own hear 🕽 young redder, when in any way, you have tried to be useful to others.

Minnie was passing the Summer in Newport and, on board the steamer Empire State the had seen several wounded soldiers. returning to their homes ; to die, or to be pursed by loving hands and prepared to return to the battle field. Her little heart, was touched with pity for the poor sick man who told Mamma that "his shoulder was all riddled through with shot from the guns of the enemy." So when she any Jennie was preparing lint for shot wounds, she understood what it meant, and eagerly offered her assistance.

Not the kind of lint Jennie was preparing was too difficult for her little fingers. For Minnie is the most fairy like, merry little sprite you can imagine. For a long while after her birth, Miss Dolly's cradle was of ample size for the wee bit baby-and she was dandled about on a pillow-and looked for all the world like a small doll abanged into a real flesh and blood baby. At the time our story commences—she has coased to be the baby at home—and while un a visit to the sensione—she feels herself quite big enough to be useful.

When the tea bell rung, Minnie was seate

nd on the lawn with a paper box contain. ing three square places of linen about as large as the palm of her own little hand. Listen now while I tell you the size of the pieces and remember what Minuie was doing with this old course lines, that you may be prepared to follow her example She pulled every thread out-and let it fall When the box is full, Jennie will take a handful and lay it on a thin piece of white paper and iron it. Then she will lay another paper down and place another handful of threads on it, and iron that smooth also.— You ought to see a box of lint prepared in this way it looks real nice, Munic says, just hke pile of anow banks with papers table. What's my little puss been doing for the soldiers enquires, Grandpapa?

Oh I'm making Glint says Minute?-Merry peels of laughter rung around the table yet I am not sure but that is what she heard it called. The Commander of the great Union Unitaries, army before Richmond has up to this United Congregational, time suffered no defeat. Since the camprign opened the rebels have retired before him at Manassas and at Yorktown ; twhile his army has been engaged in Marlborough Street Methodies, four severa battles—at Williamsburg, Thumes Street Methodies, West Point, Hanover Court House and Rev. William O'Reilley, West Polit, Merchesides several brilliant Rev. M. T. Maguire, Skirmishes, in all of which it has been George B. Weaver, William G. Carpenter, successful. The conduct of the army thus far, with the sole exception of the hapless division of General Casey at Fair Oak, has been worthy its character and the cause it defends.

When the story of the whole war can be told it will not be forgotten that certain of every step. Heroic risks, brilliant dashes, dazzling but dangerous movements were not for him. He must be content to be successful, not the romantic, hero of the war. For he was not only before Richmond, but before Washington. He was not merely attacking the rebel capital, he was defending his own. He was moving a hundred thousand men across an encmy's country already stripped, against the intrenched head-quarters of rebellion, defended by the most desperate the most skillful, and the best armed of the enemy. Risk, dash, brilliancy, were not necessary, however captivating, but success was indispensable .-He had gone to take Richmond. And in nothing more strikingly does he show his soldierly genius than in adapting his movements to the circumstances of the campaigu. A year ago, upon guerrilla duty, as it were, in Western Virginia, his daily bulletins sparkled like shocks from an electrical battery. Nobedy complained that he was to slow, or leved to-morrow better than to day. In Eastern Virginia for the last two months he has been upon other than guerrilla duty.
